

HADLEY GIVES RECIPE FOR RESTORING G. O. P.

Must Purify National Committee and Change Basis of Representation, He Says.

WOULD CALL CONVENTION

Should Curb "Disproportionate Influence of South," He Thinks, and Choose Delegates by Direct Primaries.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)

Trenton, N. J., June 28.—Former Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri and former Governor Edward Casper Stokes of New Jersey were very considerate of each other at the Republican rally to-day at the Broad Street Theatre. In his introductory remarks Mr. Stokes referred to Hadley as "one of the big men of the country," and while he said he was not a prophet he predicted that Mr. Hadley would be the next Republican occupant of the Presidential chair.

Mr. Hadley was not to be outdone. He began his address with a few general remarks which he said that he wondered why New Jersey went outside the state for a man to speak on public questions.

"You have a man in your midst," he continued, "whom you honored with your confidence in the past and who proved by his performance then that he deserved to be trusted."

This reference was immediately construed by the audience to mean that Mr. Stokes would again be a candidate for Governor and was greeted with hearty applause.

The object of the meeting of to-day was primarily to show the voters of this section that such progressive statesmen as the former Governor of Missouri, who led the fight for Colonel Roosevelt at the last Republican convention, was willing to work in the Republican ranks.

Governor Hadley said he was not convinced that the Republican party had outlived its usefulness and ought to die. It was deserving of the confidence of the people for many years, he declared, and it would be deserving of such confidence again. He then analyzed the defeat of last fall and declared that it was not so hopeless as some people would have the voters believe. He told of the results of the spring election in several states and said that this showed that the people were returning to the Republican ranks.

He did not deny that there had been a grievous offence committed at the Chicago convention, but he referred to this as "the abuse of political power by twenty-seven members of the Republican National Committee." He said the Republican National Committee must be made truly representative and that the basis of representation must be changed so that the Southern states, where the party existed in name only, should not be allowed to wield a disproportionate influence. All delegates to the national convention, he concluded, should be chosen by direct primaries and the present national committee should call a convention at once to consider such matters.

COLBY'S CANOE UPSET

Former Jersey Senator in Danger While Fishing in Canada.

(From The Tribune Correspondent.) West Orange, N. J., June 28.—Everett Colby, former State Senator from Essex County, refused to-day to discuss the political situation, and it is not known whether or not he will be a candidate at the primaries for the Progressive nomination for Governor.

Mr. Colby has just returned from a fishing trip to Canada with Hendon Chubb, of East Orange. The two men were shooting rapids in the St. Anne de Monte River, when their canoe overturned and they were spilled out. They were in abundance of clothing and heavy rubber boots, and had a difficult time getting to shore.

TO MAKE MUSIC AT POLE

Winter Nights Will Be One Long Concert for MacMillan Party.

To cheer the winter nights in the frozen north the Crocker Land expedition will carry with it when it leaves port on Wednesday numerous musical instruments, including a phonograph. The Eskimos will therefore get all the latest tunes.

Dr. MacMillan, who heads the party, said that several members were accomplished musicians, and they will take along some stringed instruments, including a banjo, guitar and mandolin. Games of different sorts also will be in the equipment.

Members of the expedition were busy yesterday getting their material together, and assembling their scientific instruments and moving picture apparatus.

Dr. Edmond Otis Hovey, chairman of the committee which has brought about the formation of the expedition, put a quietus on rumors that two more of the party would be married before the start was made on the three-year journey. W. Elmer Ekkblaw and Maurice C. Tanquary, who were mentioned as contemplating the step, will not get married before the party sails, he said.

J. L. Allen, wireless expert of the expedition, was the first to give the heads of the party any fears that Cupid intended "butting in," for he was married to Miss Victoria Clark on Friday, June 13. Ekkblaw's fiancee is Miss Augusta Krieger, and Tanquary's is Miss Josephine Perry. The couples became engaged a month ago.

DULFER WITNESS GONE

Larceny Charge Against Police Captain's Son Held Up.

Brooklyn detectives searched yesterday for Miss Agnes Anderson, the young woman who is wanted to testify against Arthur Dulfer, son of Police Captain John Dulfer, of the Richmond Hill precinct, who is accused of stealing a purse containing $50 from the young woman. Miss Anderson disappeared after spending Thursday night at the house of her employer, at No. 56 Hawthorne street, Flatbush. It was learned that on Friday she visited the Norwegian Home for Working Girls, at No. 221 9th street, which is not far from the scene of the robbery, and left word that she was going to visit friends in the West. The police believe she is still in Brooklyn.

Dulfer was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Marsh in the Flatbush court, charged with grand larceny, but the failure of Magistrate Louis H. Reynolds, who assisted in arresting Dulfer, to be present necessitated an adjournment to-morrow. A subpoena was issued for the appearance of Magistrate Reynolds.

SAVES BOY FROM DROWNING

Lad of 17 Rescues One of 12 from Bronx River—Pulmoter Effective.

Frank Gillespie, twelve years old, of No. 655 East 16th street, while swimming in the Bronx River, near the Westchester Avenue Bridge, late yesterday afternoon with a number of companions, was seized with a cramp and sank from view.

The screams of the other boys were heard by Stephen Shirley, seventeen years old, of No. 174 Hoe Avenue, The Bronx, who was on the bank. Shirley, without removing his clothing, jumped into the river and swam to the spot where the boy had come to the surface for the second time. He grabbed the boy by the hair as he was going under, and swam with him to the shore.

An ambulance was summoned from Lebanon Hospital. Dr. Elstein soon arrived with a pulmoter, and after working over the boy for half an hour revived him.

DOG'S BITE ENDANGERS SIGHT

Child May Lose Use of Eye as Result of Attack.

Physicians at the Williamsburg Hospital believe that David Tope, three years old, of No. 135 Franklin street, Williamsburg, will lose the sight of his left eye as the result of having been bitten by a dog yesterday. When attacked the child was playing in front of his home.

Two men fought off the animal and the police of the Greenpoint avenue station captured the dog and sent it to the Board of Health for examination.

PHONE A BRITISH WOE

"Chaotic and Maddening Service," Says One Subscriber.

APOLOGY FOR CRITICISING

Postmaster General's Time, It Appears, Is Too Much Occupied with Irish Finance.

(From The Tribune Correspondent.) London, June 21.—The government telephone service in England has become such a joke that it is difficult for persons in New York to realize what an awful thing the English telephone is, but perhaps the following letter from a subscriber to Herbert L. Samuel, the Postmaster General, under whose department the telephone comes, will give some idea of what the public has to bear:

"Dear Mr. Samuel: I have refrained for some considerable time from addressing you on matters of complaint in connection with the telephone, telegraph and postal services, for I have felt it was simply a useless waste of time to do so, the only result being belated replies on your part, some of these replies being about a month after the date of my complaint, and as the occasions for complaint are so frequent it is only a further waste of time to reply to your belated answers.

"I will, however, give you a few instances of the services which you have not hesitated to describe as satisfactory to the public, your argument being that because the complaints are fewer the service is better. This is absurd.

"One of your stock remarks in connection with telephone complaints is that notice was not immediately given to the supervisor or the clerk in charge. Do you imagine a business man, after wasting considerable time upon the telephone through the exasperating carelessness or inefficiency of your service, can waste still further time and temper in making complaints to a clerk in charge, who, from my experience, does not concern himself very much about the complaint?

A Pleasant Little Practice.

"It has now become an almost constant practice for your operators immediately after one subscriber is connected with another to cut off the connection and ask, 'What number do you want?'

The other day, speaking in the House of Commons cloakroom telephone to the City, this happened to me three times during one short conversation.

"If the present chaotic and maddening telephone service you supply to the public is to continue I would suggest that the government provide special lunatic asylums for those subscribers who will be driven mad by the use of what I believe to be the most inefficient and exasperating telephone service in the whole world.

"The trunk lines between London and Liverpool are occasionally satisfactory; at other times they are so very unsatisfactory that I fear some disaster may arise through imperfect communication. When speaking to my Liverpool manager, giving instructions which are of vital importance and sometimes involving many thousands of pounds, the line is intermittent, with the result that I do not know whether my instructions have been received or not.

"At other times, it is so faint, or the 'buzzing' is so loud that communication is impossible. There is no excuse for it, for within a short time, on another call, I may get a perfect line. Your usual excuse is the suggestion that my instruments are out of order; all I have to say is that if they are out of order one minute and in order the next it is very remarkable.

CRITIC TOLD HE IS RUDE.

"On one occasion you were good enough to remark to me that you thought my communication was rude. Do you think your inefficient and exasperating service is conducive to politeness?"

"The telephone, telegraph and postal services, although under government control, are a business undertaking, and ought to be conducted in a businesslike manner, but when the Postmaster General's time and attention are occupied on such an intricate matter as Irish Home Rule finance, it is, I presume, impossible for him to attend to the duties of his office, for which he receives a substantial salary.

"The telephone service has seriously deteriorated since it passed from the National Telephone Company into the hands of your department, and the postal and telegraph services are less efficient than they were in the days of your predecessor.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to make some endeavor to approximate to the telephone service which other countries provide for their subscribers.

"With apologies for my audacity in making complaints about a service which you would appear to consider perfect, I am, yours truly, R. P. HOUSTON."
